1 Consumer rights following sale and account reconciliation

1.1 In this notice "the Act" means the National Credit Act 34 of 2005, "you" means TEST Borrower and "we" means TEST Credit Provider, registered credit provider NCRCP00000. This is our notice under sections 127(5) and 131 of the Act after the sale of the asset attached under agreement AF-NCA-S131-TEST. The figures above show the settlement value immediately before the sale, the gross and net proceeds, the costs deducted from the proceeds or charged to your account, and the result.

1.2 The net proceeds exceeded what you owe by R 180.00. Under section 127 of the Act that amount is due to you, and we have issued a payment instruction with this notice for the bank account you gave us after our valuation notice. Payment remains outstanding until bank execution is evidenced; this notice does not confirm that the bank has paid you.

1.3 The agreement ends when any shortfall has been paid to us and any surplus has been paid to you. If you believe the sale price or any cost shown is wrong, tell us in writing; section 128 of the Act also allows you to apply to the National Consumer Tribunal to review the sale.
